In February 1993 when the transcribers first started extracting the information contained in the Town Books, we thought it would take just a few weeks as we were told there were only a few books that contained any kind of vital records information. But as Joan Reed, Jean Dubord and I dug throughout the stacks of dusty, musty old books in the old vault at the Community Center, we soon found the records to be a lot more complete than we had ever imagined. In the weeks that followed, Betty Ellis, Mary Wright, Nancy Bryant, Jean Dubord, Margaret Ross and I spent many hours in the Municipal Building finding more and more tidbits of information to add to the growing stack of worksheets. The big job was to type them into the computer, and I spent hundreds of hours of doing just that. But each page completed brought us closer to our finished product; with the help of the following people and a lot of others not mentioned, the project is finally ready:

To Joan Reed, Town Clerk, for her cooperation in opening vaults, carrying books and answering numerous questions

To Larry Dubord, President of the Farmington Historical Society for his support in getting this project off the ground; and to the Historical Society for its financial support

To Jean Oplinger, Farmington Librarian for her enthusiasm and help with find funding for the project; and to David Olsen UMF Librarian for his support

To Jean Dubord for her hours of proof reading and many trips back to the town office to help with error checking

To International Paper Co. for their financial support

To Steve Grant of Maverick Computers for help getting this project ready for the printer

To Richard Mallet for his continued interest and enthusiasm

To my husband Malcolm, for his support and understanding while I was working on this project

And to everyone who contributed in some small way, a heartfelt Thank You!

PREFACE

Old town records are typically difficult to read and most often have years of records missing. Farmington is no exception. Even though the remaining books have been fairly well cared-for over the years, age and acid content of paper have contributed to their deterioration. Because of that deterioration, Farmington's books have not been available for research purposes, except on microfilm in the State Archives. And as any researcher knows, microfilm is often faded and impossible to read.

We obtained permission to access these old books for the purpose of extracting information for the Bicentennial year. Even working with the old books was a challenge. One of the earliest books, one with marriages and marriage intentions, was badly worn and faded with the edges frayed. Another, with the early families, was most difficult to read because of the penmanship a/k/a "hen scratching". We put our heads together to try to accurately extract the information, but in some cases, it was impossible to figure out. That's why the question marks are inserted in entries.

When working with the books of marriages, we found three dates. One is an intention date, one a date on which the certificate of marriage was issued and the third was the actual marriage date.

All records were transcribed verbatim. There seemed to be no standardized way of spelling names and often we found discrepancies in dates. We had no way of knowing what was correct, so entries reflect an apparent lack of exactness on the part of the Town Clerk of the time and perhaps the lack of knowledge on the part of the person providing the information.

If questions arose while the typing was being done, we went back to the books to double check the entries. Even as hard as we tried to be accurate, I'm sure some names and dates may not match with names and dates of other research sources. We could provide only the information contained in the town records and that was the purpose of this book.

During our search and transcription period, Joan Reed found additional packets of information - scraps of paper submitted to the Town Clerk of the era. We went back through all the lists of marriages, intentions etc. and found that many of these tidbits of information had never been entered into the town books at all. We added this information to our ever-growing lists. Later on, Joan also found huge packets of delayed births and birth corrections. Those have also been included.

We hope our work will be appreciated and used by genealogists and historians for years to come. And although we worked on the project as volunteers, our reward will come from knowing the Farmington Town Records are now available for people to access freely.
