THE FRENCH-CANADIAN MARRIAGES OF ST. LAWRENCE CHURCH,
CENTREDALE, RHODE ISLAND (1907 - 1970)

Compiled By: Rev. Dennis M. Boudreau

TO THE READER/RESEARCHER:

This repertoire of marriages is set-up in the following fashion:

Each family is headed by its surname. Members of a certain family form the first entry in each line of information; this is followed by the particular person's parents (father & mother with maiden name).

Next is the marriage data. ALL marriage data is recorded in the French fashion: DAY/MONTH/YEAR, rather than in today's style of month/day/year. This is to keep in form with other genealogical researchers around the world. (e.g. 11/12/1950 = 11 December 1950 and NOT Nov.12, 1950).

After the marriage date is the name of the spouse.

The second line of information records the dates and places of BAPTISM. Baptisms performed in the Centredale area are inscribed Cent.; Providence baptisms are Prov.; those inscribed as Smithfield are recorded at St. Michael's Church in Georgia-ville for the most part.

Other information regarding second marriages, or Vf. = veuf (widower of); or Vve. =veuve (widow of) may also be found in the second information line. The notation réhab. = rehabilitation (the blessing of a civil marriage) can also be found in some instances.

THE CANADIAN PRESENCE IN NORTH PROVIDENCE, RHODE ISLAND

When speaking of the French-Canadian immigration into Rhode Island, one immediately thinks of the movement into the Woonsocket and lower Blackstone Valley areas, as well as into the Pawtuxet Valley (West Warwick) areas of the State. Certainly, it is there that one continues to find the heaviest concentration of Canadian descendants. What brought them here, as elsewhere in New England, was of course the growth and expansion of the textile industry, whose mills dotted Rhode Island's cities and countryside villages.

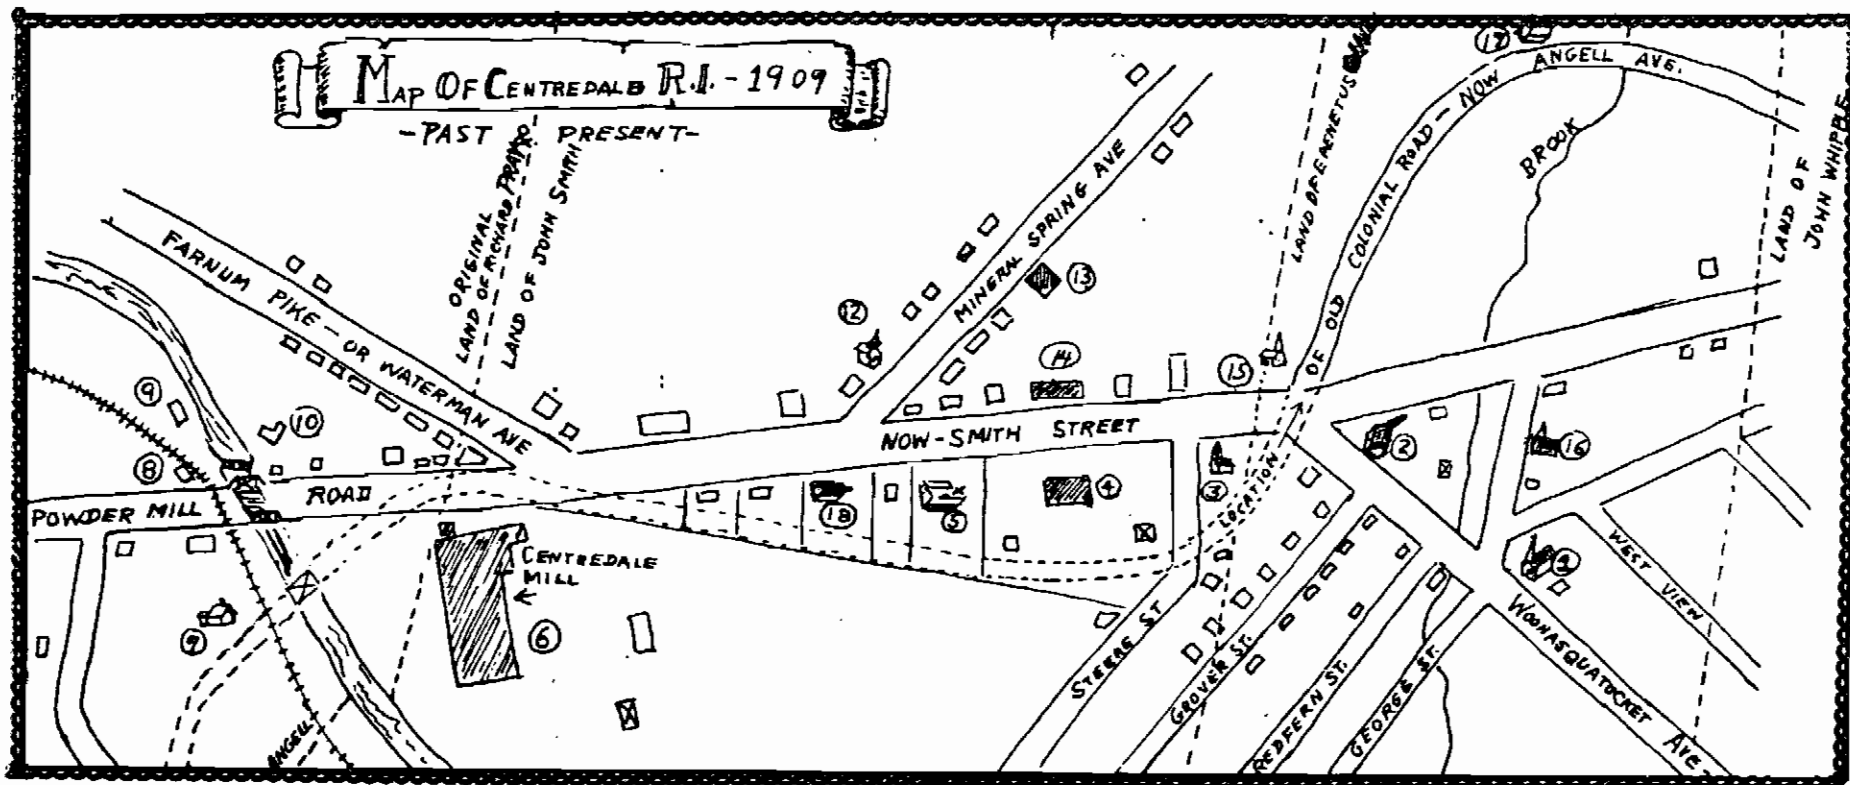

There were, however, other centers where the French-Canadian culture seeded and blossomed, which to this day, have been unfortunately neglected. Among these areas have been the "little Canada's" of Harrisville, Pascoag, Nasonville, Mapleville, Slatersville and Forestdale in northern Rhode Island; the parishes of St-Charles-Borromeo in Providence and St-Jean-Baptiste in Warren, two of the earliest Catholic parishes established primarily for the French-Canadians in 1874 and 1877 respectively; and the string of mill villages which lined the shores of the Woonasquatucket River valley, such as Stillwater, Georgiaville and Esmond in the Town of Smithfield; Greystone, Centredale, Allendale, and Lymansville in the Town of North Providence; and Manton and Olneyville in the City of Providence.

By 1895, these areas comprised nearly 11,000 Canadians, over one-fourth of the French population already established in the State¹. From the turn of the century until the mid-1960's, this Canadian presence in the Woonasquatucket area far-outshined the rest of its Yankee, Irish and Italian population by seven in ten persons. This was no less true of the French population at the extreme western end of the town of North Providence, still known today as Centredale.

It was strange to read recently of the Immigration and Naturalization Department's raiding of a local mill to capture illegal Hispanic laborers, whose looms were once tended primarily by English and French employees. It is equally difficult to believe that such a presently predominant Italo-American town could have been once a thriving Franco-American community, because until the mid-1950's, only two in ten people were of another ethnic background. The major group in the village was Franco-American. It is with this latter group that the following pages will be concerned.

Historical Background

Among those to thus push out into the common land and take up holdings therein were Thomas Angell, John Smith (the Miller), Epenetus Olney, and Richard Pray, and these men appear to have been the pioneers in the settlement of that portion of the Woonasquatucket valley which afterward became known as Centredale².

One hundred and twenty-nine years after the founding of the Town of Providence by Roger Williams and his associates, North Providence was incorporated as a separate township, in 1765. The village of Centredale grew up surrounding a colonial saw mill, built towards the year 1700 by Captain Richard Arnold, one of four such mills founded in the colony. By 1840, the mill had fallen into decay and was thus abandoned³.

In 1776, the May session of the General Assembly appointed John Jenckes and John Waterman to procure a "suitable site and erect a (gun) powder mill"⁴, which they did on the shore opposite Arnold's saw mill. This second mill, which contributed to the colony's Revolutionary War munitions, continued in operation until the afternoon of August 28, 1779, when there was a terrific explosion, the flash and shock of which could be seen and felt for miles around. In fact, one of the mill's beams had been thrust nearly three-fourth's of a mile from the site. The mill was completely devastated, and both operators, Jacob Goff and Laban Beverly were quite burned, dying the evening of the following day from their injuries⁵. It was also for this second mill that the present Putnam Pike (Route 44) received its colonial name, Powder Mill Turnpike.

In 1787, Isaac Olney, who had previously bought the powder mill property, erected a grist mill, which he continued to operate until October 27, 1797, selling it to one of the new owners of the saw mill, William Goddard. The latter person had Olney's mill moved across the river and connected to the mill that he owned.

Across the river from him, Israel Arnold built a small spinning mill in 1812, naming it the Center Mill⁶ because of its location, approximately four miles from Greenville, four miles from Pawtucket, four miles from Providence, and seven miles from Scituate. The name of the village changed from Center Mill to Centerville, and finally, to Centredale in 1849, when the first post office was established there, and to distinguish it from the Centerville in the Pawtuxet Valley area.

The Center Mill which originally gave the village its name, along with its four or five mill houses gave the appearance of a busy little village. The country around Centredale soon began to feel the impetus given to it by the textile industry, which invited other industries to locate there.

THE CENTER MILL

Arnold's mill was the first spinning mill in the area, and continued in operation despite two major fires in 1850 and in 1889, and a long list of new proprietors, well into the early 1900's. In 1891, new machinery was brought in from England, giving it the capacity to manufacture some of the finest grades of worsted yarns. By 1909, the mill had increased about three times its original size, and gave employment to more than three hundred people in its various departments⁷.

⁷Angell, Ibid., pp. 64-65.

THE ALLENDALE MILL

In 1822, another mill was begun just south of Centredale, also on the North Providence shore of the Woonasquatucket by Zechariah Allen. He not only established the mill, but also had mill houses and a small church, modeled after one he once saw in Normandy, France constructed for his employees. The village was named Allendale in his honor, and the church still serves today to house its Baptist congregation.

A native of Providence, Allen supposedly installed the first power loom for the making of woolen broadcloth. In 1915, the PROVIDENCE SUNDAY TRIBUNE reported that over 200 men and women were employed by the mill⁸. No doubt, the bulk of which were French-Canadians.

Zechariah Allen built another mill in 1853 in Georgiaville, along with several stone boarding-houses, which still exist. This mill attracted many Canadian, as well as Portuguese immigrants to the Smithfield area⁹.

As early as 1817, Chief Justice Daniel Lyman had contracted and constructed a small mill in the southwestern part of the town which still bears his name, Lymanville. Mill workers from Germany, Italy, as well as many French-Canadians from the Manton section of Providence were among the employees of this textile company¹⁰.

THE LYMANVILLE MILL

Being the useful resource that it was, the Woonasquatucket River gave rise to many other such textile and manufacturing companies, which continued to grow along its banks. In 1904 and in 1906, the Greystone and Esmond mill complexes and villages were established, attracting still more Franco-Americans to the area, as well as immigrants from the Lancashire and Yorkshire sections of England.

A New Parish

At the crossroads of what is today Smith Street, Mineral Spring Avenue and Woonasquatucket Avenue, there once existed a thriving Franco-American community, whose influence was felt more than a half of a century in the religious and civic affairs of the town.

In his book, THE ANNALS OF CENTREDALE, 1636 - 1909, author Frank C. Angell, a direct descendant of Thomas Angell (one of Providence's co-founders), a leader in local civic affairs, a land owner and philanthropist, and a founder of the Union Free Library Association of Centredale, concludes his book on the first three hundred years of the town's history without mentioning the influx of immigrants into the primarily English-populated village, known today as the seat of government of North Providence.

This forgotten influx is merely alluded to in Angell's chapter on the churches of the town, where he summarizes the founding of St. Lawrence Parish as follows:

Until the summer of 1907 Centredale was included in the parish of St. Thomas, at Manton, about two miles distant, necessitating quite a long walk for those who desired to attend service, and many were unable to do so from some disability or the infirmities of old age.

As the population increased, the adherents of the Catholic Church increased accordingly, and eventually numbered about 400 communicants in and around Centredale¹¹.

Until July 1, 1907, Catholics from the area were forced to walk either the three miles north to St. Michael's Church in Georgiaville (established in 1875) or the two miles south to St. Thomas Church in Manton (established on April 7, 1886)¹². At the turn of the century, the bulk of the immigrant population in the valley were of Irish, Italian and French-Canadian extraction, all of whom were becoming so numerous to the region that they were beginning to overshadow the Yankee pioneers' descendants, who had previously established there.

The new parish of St. Lawrence was comprised at first of some forty-plus families, and met for its first Mass in a room of the Allendale Mill complex, a little shorter than half the journey to Manton, on Sunday morning, July 7, 1907. The previous day, Bishop Matthew Harkins had incorporated the parish and appointed the Rev. Joseph Hardy as its founding pastor, along with Thomas A. Christian and Philius Tetreault as its first lay trustees¹³. By the time this article was first published, the parish had just celebrated its seventy-fifth anniversary, thanks to the dedicated service of so many priests, religious and people.

¹¹Angell, Frank C., pp. 94-95.

¹²Diocese of Providence, OFFICIAL DIRECTORY, 1982., p. 246.

For the first four months, Mass continued to be said at the mill site, while during that time, the parish acquired land for the new church building on the corner of Woonasquatucket Avenue and George Street, actually in Centredale. On August 24, 1907, the parish corporation entered into negotiation with Miss Isabel Smith to purchase from her a dwelling and a barn, directly opposite the church property, the dwelling of which today still serves as the present rectory of the parish. On October 20th of that year, Bishop Harkins returned to Centredale to lead the ground-breaking ceremonies and to bless the cornerstone of the edifice. One week later, so desirous were the parishioners to have their own place of worship, Mass was celebrated by Father Hardy in the finished basement of the structure. The upper church was finally completed in 1913, with a bell spire which rose 107 feet into the sky. The church was formally dedicated on Monday, May 31, 1915 by Bishop Harkins, after which he administered the sacrament of Confirmation to 100 of the parish's children.

From perusing the parish registers, one could say that the population of the parish during its early years was predominantly French-Canadian, followed closely by a large Irish population. The Italians were a smaller group at the time, and most of them founded their own parish just across the Woonasquatucket River in the Town of Johnston. Our Lady of Grace Parish was established by them in 1913 to serve their own ethnic needs. Similarly, another French-Canadian parish, Presentation of the Virgin Mary, was founded in 1912, to serve the needs of Canadians in the Marievalle section of the town, nearer to Pawtucket¹⁴.

Regarding the pastors and parish priests, both the French and the Irish held the reigns of spiritual government, and continue to do so, as is shown by the following list of pastors of the parish:

Rev. Dennis Fullam	(1925-1930)	Irish

ST. LAWRENCE CHURCH

It was during Father Plasse's pastorate that the Parish broke ground for their own school, a long-cherished dream of the parishioners. This materialized during the summer of 1954. By the following September of 1955, the Sisters of the Holy Union began to conduct classes in the new building. The parochial school, which saw large enrollments during the 1960's, has since closed and become St. Patrick's High School. Of the many students to pass through St. Lawrence School, three have become priests for the Roman Catholic Diocese of Providence, all of French-Canadian extraction: Rev. Dennis M. Boudreau (ordained 1977), Rev. Pierre J. Plante (ordained 1978), and Rev. Timothy J. Lemelin (ordained 1978).

Over the years, the parish has likewise grown. On September 6, 1967, St. Lawrence Parish was split to form the new Parish of Mary, Mother of Mankind, on the northern side of Mineral Spring Avenue.

Its Franco-American Parishioners

Despite the fact that North Providence today is for the most part Italian, there was a time when the Canadian presence was strongly recognized in and about Centredale. When speaking of that presence in the area, one immediately thinks of the large pioneer families which gave the parish four of its trustees: Alexis Cardin, Eugene Jetté, Philias Tetreault, and Peter Laboissonière.

One also recognizes that there were principally three major waves of French-Canadian immigration into the Woonasquatucket Valley, and each overlapping the other. The first Canadians to settle here prior to 1900 were, as previously-mentioned, attracted by the textile mills in Georgiaville, Centredale, Allendale, and Lymansville. Included in this group were those who migrated here from the towns and areas surrounding St-Pacôme and Rivière-Quelle; Bagot, Yamaska and Drummond counties; the Beauce valley, all in the Province of Quebec; and some from other Canadian establishments in New Bedford, Fall River and Webster, Massachusetts. This first grouping of immigrants comprises the first of the parishioners of St. Lawrence Parish, perhaps named after the great northern river they knew so well. The Arrival of the Acadians

The second significant wave of Canadian immigrants, from whom the author of this article descends, came primarily from the Iles-de-la-Madeleine (the Magdalen Islands), situated in the center of the Gulf of St-Lawrence, on the eastern extremity of Maritime Quebec. Like their mainland compatriots in other parts of the province, the lack of jobs and land forced these insular people, most of whom descended from the exiled Acadians, to once more leave their island home in search of new farms and new work.

Between the years 1850 and up until 1930, large groups of Madeleine Islanders had reestablished themselves on the mainland, along Quebec's north coast, at Cap-de-la-Madeleine, in the Verdun and LaSalle districts of Montreal, in the lower Beauce valley and in Halifax, Nova Scotia. A large population of them had also come to the United States, settling in and around Cambridge and Fall River, Massachusetts.

Towards 1894, the Quebec government opened a new area for settlement in the Matapédia valley of the Gaspé Peninsula. It was there that the Islanders' lumber camp grew to become what is known today as Lac-au-Saumon (Salmon Lake). Two brothers and their families from Cap-aux-Meules on the Islands were among the second group of Madelinot pioneers who in 1896 established themselves at Lac-au-Saumon. They were Alcide and Onéciphore Gaudet, the sons of Félix and Eloise (Boudreau) Gaudet. Life in the Matapédia valley was quite difficult, with many acres of trees to clear, and the majority of the people were extremely poor¹⁵.

In 1901, a year after the birth of their second daughter, Alcide and his wife, Amanda (née Vigneault), abandoned their property and relatives, and journeyed south by train to Newport, Vermont, until they finally arrived at their new home, and were greeted by familiar faces in the Globe district of Fall River. They established themselves in a tenement apartment on Peckham Street in the parish of Ste-Anne. While there, Alcide went to work as a mill carpenter in the local textile mills. Three more children were born to the couple those next few years, two daughters and a son.

In 1904, Joseph Benn and Company of Bradford, England contracted with F.P. Sheldon, a Providence mill engineering firm to build a new mill in the Greystone area of North Providence, adjacent to an earlier one, rebuilt in 1877¹⁶. It was in 1907 that Alcide Gaudet was commissioned by the Bead and Carnell Company to come to Rhode Island with other relatives and friends to help in the construction of the mill's weave shed. Those who arrived with him and his family were Elie and Isaac Boudreault (his nephew), William Vigneault (his brother-in-law), Amédée Thériault, Vital Doyle and two Raiche brothers. This family of seven, along with their seven boarders occupied a small wood-frame house on Farnum Pike in Esmond.

In 1908, another son, Alfred, was born to them, who later became the founder and owner of Club 44 on Putnam Pike, and who also served from 1949-1950 and later in the early 1970's on the North Providence town council, before the Town elected its own mayor.

A BLANKET LABEL
FROM ESMOND MILLS

That same year (1908), Alcide and his friends were again commissioned to help in the construction of the Esmond Mill, which produced European-style Jacquard blankets¹⁷ of 100% virgin wool. These blankets were difficult to weave, requiring great skill on the part of those who attended the looms.

Towards 1910, Onéophore Gaudet moved his family from Lac-au-Saumon to Esmond, to be closer to his brother, Alcide. Both of them being carpenters by trade, after a full-day's work in the mills, they would walk the two miles or so to Centredale each evening, where family tradition has it that, they continued to work well into the night re-finishing the floors of St. Lawrence rectory, as well as designing and building the sacristy for the upper church.

Later that same year, the Gaudet's moved to Mineral Spring Avenue, in Centredale, where two more daughters were born to them. They lived there until 1929, when Alcide removed his family to a new home he had finished constructing on Angell Avenue, overlooking the village. Revered by his relatives and friends as the "pioneer" of this migration, his home became the focal point of many "soirées" (social gatherings) for the Acadian community in Centredale. Visitors from the Islands and nearby Massachusetts were a frequent occurrence at their home. While there, the Gaudet's adopted another daughter, thus bringing the total number of their children to nine.

Between the years 1911 and 1930, other relatives and friends from the Islands, Lac-au-Saumon and Fall River joined them in Centredale. From frequent letter writing, urged by the promise of new jobs and a better life, this initial migration of about fifty-one persons from Havre-Aubert and ¹⁷Kulik & Bonham, Ibid., p. 225.

Bassin, Cap-aux-Meules, l'Etang-du-Nord, and Havre-aux-Maisons, most of whom were already related by blood or marriage, formed the basis of the Madelinot colony in Centredale. The next generation which followed saw an additional 75 descendants from this first group, followed by nearly 95 children in the succeeding generation.

Gaudet Street in North Providence was named for Onéiphore's family, who with their carpentry skills, helped develop the plat behind the Ronci Company, off Smith Street. The first Acadians to come to Centredale, Alcide and Amanda Gaudet celebrated their 62nd wedding anniversary on November 20, 1956, surrounded by their nine children and in-laws, fourteen grandchildren, and a score of other relatives from the Maritimes. The following January 1957, Alcide died at the age of 87. Amanda survived her husband, dying in 1968, at the age of 97.

Among the families who migrated here with origins on the Magdalen Islands were the following:

Marc Arseneault and Théophita Arseneault (of Havre-aux-Maisons)
(m. 9/1/1900 - Anqui, PQ)

Théophita had died before coming to Centredale.

Marc arrived with his three children from his first marriage, and his second wife: Luce Richard, who after his death, remarried in Centredale.

Maurice Arseneault (s/o Léger of Havre-Aubert)

He worked on the construction of the Mount Hope Bridge, and later moved to New York, where he married and presently resides in Mahopac, NY.

Alfred Benoit (s/o Onésime of Havre-Aubert)

After working several years for the Greenville Finishing Company, he returned to the Islands, where he married twice.

The children of Nectaire-Arsène Boudreau and Esther Cormier:
(m. 2/5/1892 - Havre-Aubert, PQ)

Evrade Boudreau and Anézie Gaudet (d/o Onéiphore)
(m. 14/10/1918 - Centredale, RI)

Alphonse Boudreau and Vénéda Doucet (d/o Jean-Constant)
(m. 1/10/1919 - Havre-Aubert, PQ)

Vénéda's neice, Yvonne Doucet (d/o Cléophas) married in Centredale, but returned to Canada.

Alphonse and Vénéda's grandson, Dennis Boudreau, was the first parishioner to be ordained in St. Lawrence Church, on July 2, 1977, also making him the fifth Catholic priest to descend from his Magdalen Island Boudreau family.

Vénéda Boudreau and Alfred Petitpas (s/o Alexandre)
(m. 24/11/1921 - Centredale, RI)

Samuel Boudreau and Imelda Boudreault (d/o Isaac)
(m. 23/11/1935 - Centredale, RI)
Samuel was co-owner of the old Centredale Tavern and Hotel (today's Adrien's Restaurant). To this day, no one knows whether or not he died accidentally or whether someone had pushed him. He had a habit of walking with his hands in his pockets, and due to this, was unable to break his fall down a flight of stairs.

Philomène Boudreau and Albert Leveillé
(m. 14/7/1924 - Centredale, RI)

Aléxina Boudreau and Cyrice Vigneault (s/o Alfred)
(m. 3/8/1929 - Verdun, PQ)

Nectaire-Arsène Boudreau, widower and father of the aforementioned family, along with two other children, Eva and Cyrice, lived in Centredale for a time, yet returned to Havre-Aubert, where these children married and remained.

Hormidas Vigneault and Irma Lefebvre (d/o Hermas)
 (m. 4/7/1933 - O.L. Lourdes, Providence, RI)

Anézie Vigneault, died in Centredale, unmarried.

Alfred Vigneault and his second wife, Louise Lapierre also migrated to Rhode Island settling in Our Lady of Lourdes Parish in Providence, RI.

No matter where the Magdalen Islanders settled, it must be noted that they did so in specific clusters, often marrying further descendants from the Islands, as was the case in most places they settled, including Centredale. This has ceased to be the case.

A Final Immigration

Although Centredale seemed a peaceful village in which to live, it did see its distressing moments. Over the years, much religious and ethnic bigotry continued to grow between Catholics and Non-Catholics, Canadians and Irish, the latter controlling the political machine of the township. The patriarchal and matriarchal system of running families, something taken for granted especially among the French, lasted until the 1950's and 1960's, until, as in other Franco-American communities, older generations ceded their control over family affairs through death, or to those who lived, certainly not without a final opinion, one way or another.

THE GREYSTONE MILL

Quietly, continuing to work in the Allendale and Greystone Mills, the Franco-American population of the village became its dominant working force. As time and history crept forward, Centredale passed through World War I, the Great Depression, and World War II, virtually unchanged. The town saw many of its sons march off to war, only to return and resume their lives in its peaceful setting.

For a third time, another wave of French-Canadians, primarily from Québec and other local French parishes moved into the area, joining the other already well-established families of the village. This new migration, beginning shortly after World War I and lasting well into the 1930's brought with it reverberations of the "Sentinelle Movement", which had already affected various Canadian communities throughout the State. With its pro-French, anti-Irish tenor, a local chapter of the movement began in Centredale with the arrival of these French from surrounding parishes. Fearing the threat of excommunication by the local bishop, the majority of families involved met secretly, keeping their personal feelings about the matter relatively among themselves. For the most part, in Centredale, the situation was somewhat subdued.

There were, however, some protestations, for example, parishioners would put "slugs" into the Sunday collection basket, and at night, vigilante groups would meet occasionally, often resulting in some sort of violence. During those turbulent years, the men of Centredale would meet in fields adjacent to Mineral Spring Avenue, armed with home-made clubs or 2 by 4's, in case a fight would break out between the adherents of and those opposed to the Sentinellist beliefs. It was not uncommon for some of the townsmen to return home, beaten and bleeding, from such occurrences. My maternal grandfather, Alcide Gaudet, in a story related to me by my aunt, even threw his nephew and closest friend, Isaac Boudreault, out of his house one evening for adhering to the Sentinellist philosophy. Isaac left, but returned to apologize that same evening. Their life-long friendship and family peace was a higher value worth preserving.

Among the families comprising this third wave of Canadians were the following couples or their children:

There were also Paquette's, Paquin's and Vézina's in this last migration into the area.

A Changing Face

From the late 1930's to 1950, the French population in Centredale saw more peaceful and joyful moments. During the days of the Great Depression, people often entertained themselves at home, musically. While wives were busy house-keeping and cooking for their families, their husbands worked steadily each day. During this fifteen year period, many of the Centredale pioneers saw their children married, as well as the arrival of their first grandchildren. During the evenings, the Franco-American townsmen would gather at either the Centredale Tavern (now Adrien's) or Sampson's Block (presently demolished) to exchange news, have a drink, and to play a hand or more of pitch or cribbage. Eventually, a couple of nights a week were devoted to this, with pitch games going on all over town. The younger generation, involved in sports and social gatherings, spent their leisure hours at local dances. The children of the village also had their good times, watching movies at the old Community theater, or buying penny candy at Mr. O'Reilly's store. In the winter months, there was always skating on the small pond behind the former Cranston Loan Company or on the Woonasquatucket River, as well as, many good hills available for sliding.

The 5¢ electric tram to Providence had given way to a newer, more modern bus system, and so there were always the weekly shopping trips into the city. Each Memorial Day after World War II, the Town celebrated the holiday with a big parade, which began at Fruit Hill Avenue and Smith Street and marched down Smith through Centredale, ending at the Whitehall Building on Waterman Avenue in Greystone. After the parade, the townspeople would gather at the Darnborough-Parkin V.F.W. Post on Angell Avenue to finish off the day's festivities.

For years, it seemed as though nothing would ever change. Even the town's political machine was so great, one had to vote Democratic. Certainly, there was a French population, yet the power was held by the Irish and Yankee politicians. After the death of Edward Gallagher, Democratic Party Whip on the town council, and also, the retirement of the town clerk, Louis A. Sweet, all the Irish handed-in their resignations, and the town seemed on the verge of collapse. Although some held high positions at the town hall, such as Louis Grenier, former tax collector, now was the time for the French and the Italians to come to power. For the Canadian element, that term was brief, because during the 1950's and 1960's many of the older generation Canadians were dying with each passing year, and just as many of the younger generations were beginning to move away to the suburbs. The Italian population, however, remained and steadily grew stronger, giving its character to the Town, so much so, that today, when one mentions North Providence, it is almost synonymous with them.

The Canadians did well business-wise. One can easily recall Latour's beauty salon on Smith Street, and Emery Lévesque's pharmacy at the junction of Woonasquatucket and Smith. Neither business exists today. Mr. Lévesque's drug store had its own soda fountain, where home-made ice cream was served to his customers. There was also Mr. Lanteigne's meat market, which was sold to the L'Etoile family, who later went into the auto body repair business. Mr. Lanteigne, a native of upper New Brunswick, was a carpenter by trade, and is better known for the many houses he built in and around the Centredale area. There was also Eldee's Furniture store on Mineral Spring Avenue, near the old town hall, of whom Laurence Bérubé was half-owner. Two oil companies were also run by the Canadians: the larger belonged to the Ochteau family; the smaller to the Moreau's.

Centredale has also had quite a face-lifting since the 1950's, one which makes it nearly unrecognizable to many of its non-resident natives. The old familiar buildings which were more or less landmarks have either been destroyed by fire, such as the old Centredale School on December 8, 1957, and the old Centredale Mill (owned by the Metro-Atlantic Chemical Company) which burned to the ground in the 1970's. Or they have been demolished, as was Lévesque's pharmacy and the Sampson Block. A new by-pass has been constructed to give the Smith Street rush hour traffic less congestion. At present two new multi-storied high rises for the elderly dominate the village's skyline, one of which stands atop the site of the Centredale Mill. In 1965, the town celebrated its 200th anniversary with great festivity, yet certainly, Centredale has changed very much from the village many of us knew as children.

At present, there are still some Canadians left, yet their number is very few indeed, and their descendants are scattered all over the State, and perhaps the nation as well. When one remembers such kind and interesting people as Eugene Jetté; our parish trustee, who'd tend his grapevines each year, and often give us permission to slide down his hill during the long months of winter; or his daughter, Rita Varin, who would wave to us each time we passed her Board of Canvasser's office at the town hall, and on a warm summer day, would invite us in for a cool drink of water; or the stern but good-humored Father Plasse handing out our report cards with a joke for each student; or the peg-legged, industrious François Letourneau; or the hilarious Louise Héon, life of every gathering, her laughter rising above that of everyone else; or my sympathetic and loving grandparents on both sides of the family, Alcide and Amanda Gaudet, and Alphonse and Vénéda Boudreau, and the many other jovial, and fun-loving Acadian faces who were our relatives. When one remembers all these, one can't help but want to write a small history of this close-knit community who created their own historical endeavors, minute and simple though they be. May this article preserve the memory of their valiant efforts, and all that they have given to the character and fiber of this Rhode Island township.
